

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO WOMEN
AND ABOUT THE HOUSEHOLD

By Marion Harland.

A blouse of seal skin with a collar of pointed lynx.

A set of Russian sables ornamented with tails and claws.

Unique and beautiful is the blouse of white baby lamb, with its collar of Russian sable and belt of brown velvet. A hat of brown beaver with skirt of broadcloth to match completes the costume.

The long knotted boa and big muff of bear fur look cozy on a snappy day.

Will you kindly tell me through your column where is the home of Thomas Nelson Page, the Southern writer? Also, if he is married, and if so, to whom? The above is for use in a literary club paper.

J. H. H.

He lives at No. 1708 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W., Washington D. C. He has been married twice—first, to Miss Bruce, of Virginia; the second time to Mrs. Field, of Chicago.

1. Please state if you know of anything to remove the dark color on the neck of a heater, caused by overheating.
  2. Also, if you know of anything that will clean a black marten colarette. It always soils my light collars. I have had it three years and it has never been cleaned otherwise than by brushing.
- Mrs. H. H.
1. Try cleaning it with whiting and vinegar, leaving it on for a while, then polishing it with charcolle skin.
  2. Clean with gasoline or with ether, shaking until almost dry, brushing the fur smooth.

Will you or some of your readers kindly give me the name and address of a book the title of which is the "Sixth and Seventh Books of Moses"? I have not been able to get it in the book stores. They don't seem to know of any such book. I know there is, for my father had one about twenty years ago. I do not know what he did with it.

Mrs. J. E. S.

I never heard of the book until now. "Some reader" must come to the rescue.

1. I would like to say in regard to keeping geraniums over winter: I take them up before the first hard frost in the fall, shake the dirt from the roots, tie them three or four together, by the roots and hang up in the basement, away from any wall. In the spring I set them out in the bed, and they are soon covered with healthy foliage and flowers.

I should also like to make known a recipe for chapped hands. To five cents' worth of glycerine add ten or fifteen drops of carbolic acid. Shake well and have the hands wet when applying. This is the best remedy we have ever tried. It is healing and softening. My husband is a railroad man and has always been troubled with his hands cracking, and this has completely healed them.

PANNIE.

Thank you for the recipe. But to some people the odor of carbolic acid is extremely disagreeable. To all of us it recalls associations we fain would banish. It is inseparable from our experiences as hospital tenants and visitors. My remedy, tested by ten years' use, is simple and pleasant. I send the name by mail.

Sealskin becomes scarcer and correspondingly more expensive each season. The coat pictured is of a particularly stylish cut; the collar and muff of Eastern mink adding a chic touch.

when requested to do this, and will gladly let you have it.

I have often read your kind advice to others; won't you please advise me also? I am employed for a large firm as stenographer, but matters have become so unpleasant there, I have handed in my resignation. It is the only firm I have worked for. I have been with them almost three years. Now, I have no influential friends to secure me another position, and I haven't much confidence in "ads." Will you please tell me what is the best way to secure a good permanent position, a place where the employer remembers one is human and not a machine, where he doesn't show in every word and action that he is above his employee.

The man I worked for never even addressed me as "Miss L." It is always "Betty, do that." Why, once when I met a member of our firm on the street and bowed to him, he walked on as if he didn't know me. You can imagine how

I felt. Even the men who call on my employer call me by my first name. I am only eighteen and oh, I am so miserable. I have always believed in God, but I think He has forgotten me. I don't think it just that some people (and they don't always deserve it, either), have so much and others so little. Even at school the girls who least needed a position always got the best.

I know I am taking a great liberty in writing thus to a stranger. But I feel so unhappy, I must unburden myself to some one.

B. L.

You have not taken a liberty in asking me to help you. That is what I am here for! I shall be very frank with you. It is the truest kindness, I am unfeignedly sorry for you, yet much that makes you "miserable" might be avoided, in part, by yourself. You are hurtfully sensitive and willfully morbid. Torture yourself, because it will rebound upon yourself. You are giving up a goodly portion of your capital in resigning your place. The fact that you have held it for three years is so much stock in trade. It is miserable, even judicious for you to pocket your pride and keep it pocketed until you had secured a second situation. A safe business motto is hold fast to one place while you make sure of another. When you are older you will learn what you now call "proper pride"—which is usually wounded vanity—is the most expensive luxury one who has to work for a living can keep.

I am afraid you do not really respect yourself! Otherwise, the familiar address of an employer who is not so well-bred as you are and the rudeness of the supercilious "member of the firm" would not enter your soul like poisoned arrows. Hold on, calmly, as if these things were not. Your employer and his friends who call you "Betty" probably know no better manners. Try pitying them for a change of sensation, and see how much less miserable you will be. Don't "feel" at all so far as they are concerned. Cultivate a civil indifference, and be too much absorbed in your work to notice their blunders in department.

As to your hot and hasty assumption that God has forgotten you—you will be sorry for it when you have cooled down to your sober senses. He forgets none of His children, and when He lends them in strange places, they have not known. He always has their good at heart.

Think less of how miserable you are, and more of how wise and good He is, more of what you owe to your fellows. Set about helping somebody; go out of your way to be attentive to the neglected, patient with the wayward, charitable to all. The rest will come!

I am very anxious to find a book that will teach me the Polish language. Can you inform me if there is any school where I could learn in the evening? I have been to several of our large book stores, but none carry such a book. I need to speak the Polish language where I am employed, so I am very anxious to find some way by which I can learn it.

Having been employed in the tea and coffee business for some ten or eleven years, and wishing to become an expert salesman in that line, my object in writing to you is this: Are there any journals, papers or books which I may subscribe for which will help me? I have a fair knowledge of teas and coffees, but would like to know where the different varieties are raised, and the way in which they are prepared for the market. Being a constant reader of your department of the paper, and this being my first offense, I trust you will favor me with a reply.

A. P. P.

Your zealous desire to become thoroughly acquainted with every department of your business, instead of being content with just enough knowledge of it to enable you to draw your salary regularly, is not such a common happening as to make it offensive in any sense of the word. I refer you to my pertinent and modest queries to an intelligent and many-sided constituency, sure of their sympathy and co-operation.

I am the owner of an incense burner of Chinese workmanship. Carved upon the lid is a carved dog. I desire to know what part the dog plays in Chinese worship. My books of reference make no mention of the dog. I find only that the ancient Egyptian and Chinese religions were similar, and that in some parts of Egypt the dog was worshipped. If you find it necessary to appeal to your readers will you oblige me by so doing? D. M.

The dog was a domestic favorite over 5,000 years ago, and has held his own through all the centuries. As is well known, with the lower classes of Chinese puppies are an article of food. I do not know what part the animal played in their ancient worship, or if he holds any such part now.

Referred.

MARION HARLAND'S RECIPES

Cocoanut Pie.

Rub a half-cup of butter and a cup of sugar to a cream, adding as you do so a tablespoonful, each, of rosewater and sherry. Into this beat a small cupful of grated cocoanut, whip in the stiffened whites of three eggs, and bake in pie-plates, lined with puff-paste.

Whole Wheat Bread.

Dissolve a cake of compressed yeast in a gill of lukewarm water. Pour into a bowl a pint of milk and stir into this a pint of boiling water, add a teaspoonful, each, of salt and sugar, and when the mixture is lukewarm, add the dissolved yeast. Stir in a quart of whole wheat flour—or enough to make a batter, Beat

At the end of three hours knead for five minutes, make into loaves, knead each of these for two minutes, and set to rise for about an hour before baking in a steady oven.

HE RESISTED ARREST

And Officer Farley Was Compelled to Make Use of His Club.

Peter Gathright, of Hanover, a young fellow not over twenty-two years of age, spent the night in a cell at the Second Police Station on the double charge of being drunk on the street and resisting an officer in the discharge of his duty. Gathright was arrested by Acting Sergeant Farley, who was compelled to use force in order to take the man to the station. He defied the officer to take him and said he could whip any six men in Richmond. He tried to strike the officer and received a tap on the top from which the blood flowed freely. The ambulance surgeon pronounced the wound a laceration, not even requiring a bandage.

When arrested Gathright was seated in his wagon driving from one side of Broad Street to the other. Several times he came near running over people and paid no heed whatever to his horse. The horse was stabled by the police.

CHILD LABOR BILL

At the regular monthly meeting of the Trade and Labor Council last night, the child labor bill, which is now pending before the Legislature, was reendorsed, and every effort will be exerted by this organization to effect its passage. The question was discussed at some length, every speaker recording himself as heartily in favor of the proposed legislation.

PRECEDED JEFFERSON

Veteran Actor Who Suggested Role to Joe Is Dead.

HE HAD BEEN IN THIS CITY

Mr. Samuel W. Glenn, Once Manager of Theatre in Norfolk, Died Yesterday in Baltimore in His 73d Year.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) BALTIMORE, MD., Feb. 10.—Samuel W. Glenn, the veteran actor, died at the home of his son-in-law, Author Benoit, No. 1917 Garrett Avenue, this morning. Mr. Glenn had been on the stage the greater part of his life and in his early days was famous as an actor of German characters. He traveled for some time with Maggie Mitchell, and during the Civil War conducted a theatre in Norfolk, Virginia.

Mr. Glenn was about seventy-three years of age, and during the course of his career on the stage he had played with a number of the most prominent actors. The first part in which he made a hit was in an old farce, long forgotten, entitled "The Persecuted Dutchman," in which he was extremely amusing. He was also known for his impersonation of Richard the Third in a burlesque of Shakespeare's plays called "Dick, the Three Times."

Mr. Glenn, however, had a good command of sentiment and pathos and did not confine himself entirely to comic characters.

His last visit to Richmond was in 1899 on a tour of the South. He spent a good portion of an entire day wandering about the city searching out old landmarks and recalling old names. He met many persons who remembered him.

Glenn has always said that it was at his suggestion that Joe Jefferson undertook "Rip Van Winkle." Mr. Glenn essayed the leading role four years before Mr. Jefferson played it.

Glenn has played with Edwin and probably with John Wilkes Booth also.

The Ministerial Union.

Editor Times-Dispatch:—In the report in Thursday's Times-Dispatch of the meeting on Monday of the Ministerial Union, there are some statements that demand correction. The first is with regard to a motion which I made when the minutes of the previous meeting were read for approval. The report says: "The first signs of the oncoming strife developed in connection with the reading of the minutes of the preceding session"; and then proceeds to state that "one of the members" objected to the word "interesting," used by the secretary in reference to Bishop Granbery's essay read at that meeting. It was interesting, deeply interesting, but my criticism was to the effect that a clerk was required to state facts—that is, to record the action of the body—and not to make comments.

No one expects the clerk of the Senate or House of Delegates, or of any similar assembly, to say whether the speakers were interesting or not. My motion to leave out the word was simply parliamentary, and had and could have no connection with "oncoming strife," which, by the way, did not come. I did not even have in mind the rule of the Union, that there should be no comment or discussion of such essays, but I was making a motion for the proper and accurate function of the minutes—only that and nothing more.

As to "strife," I presume the reporter used the word in the sense of debate; in the other sense there was none. I never saw a difference in which there was so much difference of opinion and at the same time so much courtesy and brotherly love. During the eloquent utterances of brethren breathing such a truly Christian spirit, I felt that it was good to be there.

It is clear that while such sentiments animate the members, the Union will live and fulfill an important mission.

A division upon certain denominational lines—that is, the Baptist and Methodist on the side favoring wider discussion, and the Presbyterians on the conservative side—does not agree with the facts developed during the debate; for three Baptists and two or three Methodists were more or less conservative in their views, and the substitute adopted, which opens the door for action on outside matters when recommended by a committee, proceeded from a Presbyterian.

ITALIAN COUNTRY CLUB
CHOOSES ITS OFFICERS

The Italian Country Club held its regular annual election of officers at the club house on West Broad Street, Road last night. The following were chosen: President, Chas. Traferri; Vice-President, F. Moriconi; Secretary, A. Casoli; Treasurer, A. Gillo. The retiring executive head of the club is Mr. E. Garzoli. After the election the officers and members enjoyed a banquet, at which all kinds of good things to drink and eat were served. The festivities lasted until a late hour.

Death of Peter S. Dovel.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) LURAY, VA., Feb. 10.—Peter S. Dovel, eighty-five years of age, died at his home near Alma, this county, last night. He was sitting in his chair when he died, but had been sick for a number of years. Mr. Dovel at one time was a minister of the German Baptist Church, but owing to his advanced age had given up the work. His wife, who is only a few years his junior, is now in a critical condition, and it is thought she cannot survive the shock of her husband's death. A large family of children survive Mr. Dovel, among whom are Mrs. T. S. Smoot, of Luray, and Mr. Jacob Dovel, one of the guards of the Virginia penitentiary.

JUDGE HORSLEY CALLS ON BALTIMORE'S MAYOR

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) BALTIMORE, MD., February 10.—Judge John D. Horsley, of Lynchburg, Va., called on Mayor Hayes to-day. The Mayor was delighted to renew acquaintance with Judge Horsley, who had been a schoolmate at the Virginia Military Institute and afterwards a fellow-soldier in the Confederate army.

A meeting was held here to-day to explain the advantages of an inland waterway from Norfolk, Va., to Beaufort Inlet, N. C., to leading business men. Congressmen Small and Thomas, of North Carolina, were present.
